Ahuimanu College.

This pleasant educational retreat, established by the Catholic Fathers of these islands, held its usual academic exhibition on the 4th instant.

We found an increase of students over last year's list; and owing to the fact that a large portion of the pupils were recent arrivals, and that many of the we'll-trained students of the past, having finished their course of studies, had returned home, we did not witness the same fine elecutionary display this year, that took place during the exhibition of last year. But the many well behaved boys, showed in all their recitations the pains and care taken by their teachers, Fathers Lieven and McGinniss. The students' band has made great progress since last year. It performs with much ease and finish; and with some professional musical direction would win praises here in town, even after our ears have been culti- | the money would be already borrowed, whereas vated and made fastidious by the delights of our | it proposes to give the authority to the King in

His Majesty and company returned to town.

The ride to Ahuimanu is an interesting excursion. The ascent and descent of the Pali would be pleasing to Alpine tourists. And then the mountain wall, at whose base you travel, which stands up so grandly like lofty buttressed palisades, whose topmost crests are ever shaded by a fleecy gauze of cloud, like an Olympian rampart, would fill every eye with pleasure, that can take delight in beautiful and noble landscape. The distance to town is sixteen miles; but horse and rider anxious to get home, got over the road in just two hours-in spite of the grand Pali declivity, which gives you one or two thousand feet of toiling stairway.

A BILL IS BEFORE the Assembly-and came very near passing a final reading on Thursday-to authorize the issue of licenses to peddle goods. wares and merchandise. A petition, signed by all the merchants and business men of this city, remonstrating against the measure, was laid before the House last week, but the majority of Representatives appear to be set in favor of it. The experience of former years proved that the peddling system was demoralizing to the people in country districts, and it was for that reason abolished. What would it become now, when the country is full of low Chinese, whose forte is peddling; when the use of opium is spreading among the natives; and when cheap gin is so abundant? It was a matter for surprise to see the Minister of the Interior advocating the licensing of peddlars. The Bill is now in the hands of a Committee.

that we had received. The editor of the Organ sufficient if the intelligent can understand it. says that he not only gives us his own thunder, but that "all classes" have furnished him with the result of their reflections. What may be meant by "all classes," we cannot undertake to surmise, but his several articles all appear to emanate from very much the same class of minds. But it does not matter to us who are the authors of his views, and whether or not they are of different classes of society; after all the talk the fact remains that those who profess opposition to the Bill profess also to be in favor of a Loan for the purposes of aiding our industrial and agricultural

Our cotemporary, when praising as his own work what emanated from the King, remarked to the effect that some of the best financial ability in the country is in the Legislature, and doubtless that they would initiate a measure satisfactory to all; but he did not seem to think that he was at all called upon to furnish any contribution to the stock of experience or thought, and up to this date we have heard of no other project than the Bill which we have advocated. If there is any one who can draft a Bill which will be satisfactory to all," to which no one can raise any objection, either real or fanciful-we would like much to see him come forward. This much is certain, that all we meet with who are anxious for the real interest of the country and for the permanence of its prosperity, are anxious that a measure having for its objects those proposed by the Bill should be passed by this Legislature. The variety of difficulties which are predicted in this matter, are like the difficulties which are often predicted in private affairs-they are found | my second visit there. not to exist as you approach them.

The idea of one writer (editorial) in the last issue of our cotemporary is that "the government of 50,000 people is a very simple problem if rightly understood," and "requires no new experiments or intricate theories." Well, every problem is very simple " if rightly understood," and we propose "no new experiments or intricate theories." It is "no new experiment or intricate theory" to give the authority to government to use its credit (the general credit) to promote the industry of its citizens; and the proposal to establish Savings Banks, though very good in itself, will not be very effectual for the purposes which we have proposed, and for what this Bill is intended to effect. Indeed, it may be doubted whether the "poorer classes" in this country would have so much use for a Savings Bank as to aggregate any considerable sum of money. We wonder how much in a year the 50,000 "poor natives." (the adjective is not ours) who are so much commiscrated by some writers, would lav by in Savings Banks? Certainly not a large sum; but still, the idea is a good one, and does not at all militate against the Loan Bill. Passing down that article, we are attracted by the advantages of borrowing at home instead of abroad. But on that point people differ, and for the purpose of the matter under discussion at present. we do not propose to go into its consideration. It is sufficient to say, that the Bill before the Assembly gives authority to do both. Now it seems as if some people supposed that by passing the Bill Privy Council, from which body three of the His Majesty the King, accompanied by his brother managers of the Loan will be selected, making so far, the Rupublican party was not strong enough ment shall consist of a Senate and Chamber of full. This certainly is a sufficient safeguard that the Loan, if accomplished, will be dealt with discreetly. All the writers who use the columns of Council will be at least as much interested as any > sold at proper rates. The fear of political complication seems to and principal to foreign bond-holders. This kind of fear of remote consequences would prevent moving in any direction. The fears of possible complications, are as if one should live in constant fear of being struck by lightning. In the first place, we do not propose not to pay, and the Loan is made doubly secure by personal security and public credit; and it is certain that the contemplated transfer of the sovereignty of Fiji to England has not arisen for a debt of forty thousand dollars,-or whatever other sum they may owe-but from the turbulence of the foreign community there.

other citizens in seeing to it that the Bonds are might not be pleasant to the "reputed author of the (our) article, and of the Bill now before the Assembly." Perhaps so. It would, however, be no argument against the Bill; and let us be glad that so unworthy a temptation was so nobly

We understood that one objection was that the Treasury notes were irredeemable for 20 years, and we pointed out that they were redeemable in five years. But now it is answered that the rate of interest is so low (4 per cent.) that no one would feel disposed to "hold them five years until due and the interest becomes due;" and again-" Though bearing interest at 4 per cent., the latter may by express terms be made payable only at the end of five years." Now if the objection is to the low rate of interest, it is no objection to the project; for the interest can easily be made larger. And though it is certain that the interest may "by express terms be made payable at the end only of five years," so it is equally certain that the lender has something to say in the matter, and it may be made payable by express terms every six months. Certainly there is nothing in the Bill to indicate the payment of interest at the end of five years only.

It is asked, do we think the trading and mercantile public of Honolula to be fools, that they cannot understand the operation of the Bill as it reads? The question is somewhat new; but we cheerfully answer that we have seen no indications of any want of intelligence in the quarter alluded to, and believe that if a few of the contemplated notes should be offered in exchange for goods and in payment of a good many existing debts, such propositions would be met with bland smiles and other indications of great affability. And we believe that if the law shall say that a bill is redeemable on demand, they-the mercantile and trading community-will understand that it is redeemable in the only legal tender known to this country-coin. We have yet to learn that a note payable on demand can be paid when demanded by offering another note. But if there is anything confusing to any one's intellect on that subject, it can be made clear by adding the words "in coin" wherever it may be necessary, or be thought necessary, so that the note might read-" interest payable half yearly, in coin"; or, "this note is redeemable in coin. We cannot follow the matter further to-day.

We think it sufficiently evident that every objection vanishes upon examination. Regarding the sentence in the same article-" Let the ignorant natives fully understand its working "-we WE RETURN to the consideration of the Loan apprehend that if nothing should be done until Bill to-day, because we believe its success is of the "ignorant," whether native or foreign, fully the utmost importance to the country. We had understand its workings, there would be very heard before the last issue of the Gazette, that little progress; and we further imagine that a that journal was coming out in an alarming man- rather heavy task it would be to undertake to enner, and the event has fully justified the hints lighten them on all subjects. It seems to be

Letter from Farani.

CHERBOURG, May 25th, 1874. DEAR ADVERTISER :- It seems to be the unenviable fortune of your correspondent Farani to arrive in France in times of political troubles or social crises. Four years ago it was to witness the preparations of a foreign war, unjustly and unwisely declared in the hope of diverting public attention from the internal complications of a declining power, and with the no less delusive idea of consolidating on a tottering throne, a dynasty founded on popular suffrage. Events have proved the vanity of the schemes of that potentate, a few years ago one of the proudest of Europe, and who died an exile, having lived long enough to see the calamities and humiliations heaped upon the land which had made him the absolute master of its destinies. And yet, the war and its terrible consequences might have been avoided, and it is now generally admitted that the main cause of the fall of Napoleon III., is to be attributed to his want of energy in the latter part of his reign and to the concessions he made to democratic ideas. Imperialism means an autocratic rule, and as such it might have been maintained in France much longer, but was doomed to destruction the moment it gave | person fair play to the dissolving action of republican notions. To his credit it must be said that it was with the best of intentions that he tried to conciliate two contradictory elements, but when he deviated from the principle of Imperial rule, his was a lost cause, and his fall was predicted by many. These retrospective considerations are of little interest however. and I must leave this trite subject to speak of the present times and of the state of affairs in Paris, on

On my arrival a few days after the meeting of the Assembly, after their Easter recess, there was a certain uneasiness in the public mind, prefatory to a conflict. It had been understood that on meeting again the Assembly would discuss and pass the Constitutional laws, which were to form the basis of the new Government. A Committee of thirty had spent much time preparing and elaborating the same; and it seemed that all the Deputies, without distinction of opinion, should have been anxious, in view of the present state of affairs, of the stagnation business and the reserved attitude of foreign monarchical powers, to go to work for the public weal, leaving aside all their hopeless intrigues toward impossible

Not so, unfortunately, with the motley assemblage we call by habit a Legislative Assembly, although it will not legislate. A pretext was sought to overthrow the Cabinet, and it was soon found on a question of mere form, the precedence to give to the discussion of the electoral laws in preference to the municipal laws. The republicans did not want the Universal Suffrage to be remodeled, for fear of their best friends, the ignorant mechanics and workmen being excluded for want of the proper status of money respectability which the new laws would require. On another hand they contend that the present Assembly was only appointed to settle all political questions arising from the German War. and that since the evacuation following the payment of the war indemnity, its mission was accomplished and that new elections should take place. They know full well that new elections would be favorable to their cause, and they were naturally opposed to a Cabinet, the members of which belonging to the monarchical side of the Assembly would frame the new Laws on a more aristocratic and exclusive basis than the blind instrument called Universal Suffrage. But, to enforce its own views, because the other portions Representatives and the President of a Republic; MUSIC AND though they were individually too weak to impose their own convictions and the government of their such Constitutional bills as may bereafter be subchoice. At the moment of the crisis they were unex- mitted pectedly reinforced by the adjunction of fifty-two the Gazette to oppose the Bill, seem to entirely members of the extreme Right, fossil believers in the ignore the idea that the members of the Privy divine right of kings to oppress nations, and in a spirit of revenge the fifty-two paladins joined, in an incestuous and monstrous alliance with the Red Republicans, to overthrow the Duke de Broglie and his cabinet, who had become obnoxious to them, when alarm some, in case of failure to pay the interest | the Ministry, tired of the political intrigues threatening public peace, resolutely declared their intention to uphold McMahon's power by supporting the Constitutional laws. It was a death blow to the Comte de Chambord's return to the throne, and they did not hesitate to help their political antagonists, believing yet that thanks to the panic and disorder resulting from their fall, their king might have an opportunity to save France, and be restored to power. They succeeded, however, in their mean and selfish plans, and the Cabinet of the Duke de Broglie fell, nearly one year (May 16th, 1874,) after M. Thiers' resignation, (May 24th, 1878,) and for the same reasons, having had to deal with the same difficulties measure comes to a vote.

The next article, under the head of "A Uto- but with less experience and talents. For a week pian Scheme," begins with the assertion that many combinations were vainly tried to form a new the writer is tempted to say something which | Cabinet, from which extreme opinions were carefully extended, and during that week, had it not been for the firm attitude of Marshal McMahon, a fearful revolution might have once more desolated the country. But he never flinched, and is said to have repeated the words he uttered when taking possession of the Malakoff tower: "Here I am, and here I will stay." At last a Cabinet composed of such members of the right as are known for their moderation, has been appointed on the 28d of May, the fact of the Prime Minister being a soldier, General de Cissey, Minister of War, seems indicative of a vigorous policy by which order will at least be preserved. It is to be hoped that the conservative portions of the Assembly, Orleanists, and moderate Republicans will lend their assistance toward voting the Constitutional laws, and that all parties, in a spirit of patriotism, should forget their dissensions, and establish a strong Government. If they fail to form a compact majority, the Assembly will be dissolved and new elections will take place, which may result in introducing in the Legislature the worst elements of an ignorant democracy, preparatory to another advent of despotism. I must here confess that the despotism of a single master is preferable to that of any mob. We can foresee the hard rule of the one but not the excesses of the other. At any rate the situation is not satisfactory, and I have thought these few considerations desirable in order to explain the somewhat confused and contradictory reports of telegrams. And now, dear ADVEBTISER, with best aloha to my Hawaiian friends, I am, yours truly,

There are rumors that the Assembly will adjourn at the end of July. A banquet will be given at Versailles to-morrow to celebrate the birthlay of General Hoche. M. The Republicans manifest joy over the prospect, believing that dissolution will be the inevitable result. The Conservatives favor either the postponement of bills until Winter if none of them can be adopted now, or the intervention of President MacMahon by means of a message, holding the Assembly responsible for the failure to organize the powers of the Executive.
